

Remote Viewing & Uninvited Visits From the Paranormal

By William Becker, Paranormal Insights & Northwest Ghost Tours

Two areas that people often ask me about are remote viewing and whether or not we should take entities home with us – invited or not!

There are several ways to remote view. Some people tend to go to a location; others tend to bring the location to them. And some do both. Each person is different, and we each have our own internal manual on how our psychic abilities work. That's a major part of the focus in the teaching I do – assisting people find what their unique, individual process is.

For me, bringing the location to me in a sense is the most natural and easiest way to remote. I don't drop into people's living room and see what they're watching on television! I mostly work with the dead or with entities that are non-human, i.e., the paranormal!

Remote Viewing Techniques

People tell me about a place, show me a photo, mention a location casually, and I start to "read" it. It's like a photo/video with the history and the entities affecting the location. And if the living are part of the cause of the paranormal activity, they also show up.

I particularly enjoy "reading" a location mentioned on a radio or television show before the activity, history, or issues of the location are revealed. It's something of a challenge and way to confirm my own abilities and those of the show. Sometimes what I get is a different layer of energy and entities than what is being presented in the program. Sometimes, like all psychics, I don't get anything. No one is always right all the time!

Sometimes the information and pictures I pick up seem to be too corny to be real – like a bad B movie. Well, I've learned not to discount those readings. Often they are the most targeted and specific! In one case, a friend mentioned a location in a town far from where I live. I said there's a cement block wall in front of the rock wall, the tunnel entrance is over here, the treasure is there, and the body is in this location.

Well, the cement block wall was in front of the rock wall, the tunnel entrance was where I saw it, the location had been used to hide stolen goods, and considering the characters involved and the people who disappeared or were killed, there probably was or had been a body. No one had looked.

Take Caution When Remote Viewing

I don't recommend remoting to people new to using their psychic gifts, and especially not until they are well versed in protecting themselves. Whether you travel to the location or bring it to you, if you can see them, they can see you. And, they can follow you back through the energy and connection you create with the place. It's like a bridge. I'm always ready to burn the bridge, repel unwelcome guests, and keep them from visiting me.

You might ask, if the entities seem benevolent, why keep them away? Well, just like the living, the dead and other paranormal entities can lie. Just because they tell you one thing, that doesn't mean it's true.

I used to get after a friend of mine who often would invite entities that seemed friendly, especially children, to come visit. This friend eventually understood the possible problems that could result from inviting even seemingly friendly entities to visit, and they do not make the invitation anymore!

There can be exceptions. Once you spend a good deal of time with specific entities at the location they usually inhabit, it's easier to determine if they really are who they present themselves to be, as well as if they have someone tagging along with them that might not be welcome!

How to Keep Entities From Going Home With You

How do I keep entities from coming home with me or coming to visit on their own? Rocky Smith, of Northwest Ghost Tours, started a process we use after each tour that includes telling the entities they can't visit us. I use a similar process after investigations and after my classes.

When we do investigations or work on communicating with paranormal entities, we are asking them to be active and to communicate with us. We must set the limits and boundaries or else that can seem an open invitation to them!
